

News archive

-

Stem cells from urine could help fix your plumbing

Friday 07th January 2011

It may be a bodily waste product, but urine contains cells with huge potential for repairing our internal plumbing.

Read more

-

Split threatens the future of Stem Cell Research

Friday 07th January 2011

The North East's leading role in stem cell and other medical research could be the first casualty of the Government's decision to split up the region, leading figures warned last night.

Read more

-

Is mitochondrial DNA the secret of prostate cancer?

Friday 07th January 2011

Fresh insight into prostate cancer has come in a study that shows the mitochondrial DNA of human prostate cancer cells are riddled with mutations.

Read more